Press Kit: Alphabet Animal Adventures Across America

A to Z with Friends, Foods and Places to Go, by Olivia Weisman and Loren Weisman

Twenty six letters. Twenty six animal friends. Twenty six foods. Twenty six places to go across America. On every page the name, the animal, the food and the city all start with that page's letter, and so do the words that describe them.

A father and his daughter wrote it together. It started when she came into his office and said, "I want to write a book," and came back the same day and said, "I want to write a book with you." They wrote every page and a description of every picture, then used MyStoryBot, an AI illustration tool, and edited what came back until it matched what they pictured. Her own drawing is on the back cover.

The book is dedicated "To Creative Dads and Daughters everywhere."

Inside the Book

- A letter hidden in every picture, and a seek and find page
- A map of all twenty six stops
- A guide to the real places behind the pages
- Words to know, from alert to zealous
- An A to Z list of every friend, food and city

How It Was Done, the Right Way

- Started Monday, May 29, 2023, with one row for every letter: a name, a describing word, an animal, a food and a city.
- The words and the ideas are theirs. AI was used for the illustrations only, from a description they wrote for every picture.
- A U.S. copyright registration filed for the text and her drawing, with the AI illustrations excluded.
- A Library of Congress Control Number set up before publication.
- Their own imprint, Dadau Publishing, with ISBNs from Bowker, one for each format.
- An ISNI, the international identifier for creators, for each author.

The Authors

Olivia Weisman is the first author of Alphabet Animal Adventures Across America: A to Z with Friends, Foods and Places to Go, an A to Z children's book she wrote with her dad, Loren Weisman, published in 2026 by Dadau Publishing in Orlando, Florida. Her own drawing is on the back cover.

Loren Weisman is an Orlando brand communications and optics strategist, the author of Music Business For Dummies (John Wiley and Sons), and the co-author, with his daughter, of Alphabet Animal Adventures Across America. He speaks on A Family Co-Authoring Blueprint to Consider: Creating and Publishing a Book With Your Daughter or Son.

Story Angles

- "I want to write a book with you": Olivia had the idea and asked her dad to write it with her.
- Their words and ideas, with AI for the pictures only: every character and background described by them, first for an illustrator.
- Twenty six real cities across America, from Atlanta to Zanesville, and O is for Orlando.
- An audiobook read by father and daughter, so a child with the book open can read along.

Questions to Ask

- Whose idea was the book, and what did she say?
- How do you write a book with a child? Where did you start?
- How did you pick 26 real cities, and why Orlando for O?
- You used AI for the pictures. How did you keep the book yours?
- Why set up copyright, a Library of Congress number and ISBNs for a family book?
- What would you tell a parent who wants to do this with their son or daughter?
